Lou Ann Stories

Chester Currin, one of our seniors here at Madison Jobe who had a colorful service in the military, handed it out to our veterans at our Veteran's Luncheon one time when he was our speaker. Recently, he brought it to my attention the other day and I was moved to write about it. The author is unknown:

“Thank you for today. This is the beginning of a new day. I can waste it or use it for good. What I do today is important because I am exchanging a day of my life for it. When tomorrow comes, this day will be gone forever---leaving in its place something I have traded for it. I want it to be gain, not loss; good, not evil; success, not failure; in order that I shall not regret the price I have paid for this day, one day of my life.”

It made me think of how many days I have spent worried about things that didn't really matter or of the days that I worked so hard because I was working to make something happen that mattered in people's lives.

It made me think about the days ahead and how we never know when it will be our last one. It made me feel humbled and yet determined to make more of each day. Each day we make choices, many choices, and I am going to try a little harder to not sweat the small stuff and to remember that most things are small stuff.

It is the small stuff in life that matters, it is the wonderful cake you might bake and share with others. It is the help you might offer a friend in need or the ride they may need to get somewhere because their car has problems or they cannot drive. It is the joke you might tell another to make them laugh.

It is also about following your own dreams and setting your own goals and making the day a good day. How I wish I had days back that I could have spent with my mother more, or my children more, or my grandmother more. I cannot have days back but what I can do is make sure that I don't waste a day. I will be more aware that I go and do and help and try and laugh and not stop in the pursuit of doing good and spreading joy and happiness and sharing with others.

There is a price for each day and I will do more to not waste a day. I will make sure that the time I trade for today will be worth it. I will do even more to make life beautiful and fun and make every day count.

I challenge each of you reading this today to do so as well. Make life better, more beautiful, more caring, more happy and full of joy. Remember, each day has a price, has a trade value, so make each day count.

With July 4th coming up, remember, too, the price of our freedom and those that have fought for it. It is just another reason to make each of our days count.
